you can't ignore the beautiful weather and lovely landscapes summer gives us. Cool summer nights are perfect for sitting outside and gazing up at the stars. For most people, summer is the most favorable season in New England!

The coronavirus pandemic has turned life upside down for just about everyone, preventing them from performing everyday activities. Seniors, who are at a higher risk, are more likely to restrict their activity and find themselves just sitting at home.

Leominster Champion - Leominster

Day honors front-line essential home care workers

More than 60,000 homecare aides are working in homes across the Commonwealth to meet the needs of vulnerable older adults during the Coronavirus pandemic.

On June 24, the Home Care Community came together to recognize these unsung front-line heroes with a Home Care Aide Recognition Day.

The recognition day was held in honor of all aides providing in-home assistance that older adults and people with disabilities need to maintain independence and well-being in their own homes. By meeting those needs at home, these workers are helping people stay out of hospitals and nursing homes during the pandemic.

Always On Call Health Services, Inc. in Leominster nominated home care aides Shelley Sedileau of Leominster and Shevaun Baker of Fitchburg for special recognition.

Sedileau is a compassionate and caring home health aide and Alzheimer's Supportive Home Care Aide, and has been a valued Always On Call Health Services, Inc. employee for more than six years. Over the course of her life, she has dedicated more than 27 years to helping others in the community through her career in health care. During these challenging times, Sedileau has passionately continued to provide the highest quality of care to her clients each and every day. Her dedication to her clients and expertise in client care is truly extraordinary. During this COVID-19 pandemic, Sedileau's commitment to her clients never wavered and she did not miss a single assignment, as her love for her clients outweighed any potential risks.

Baker is a kindhearted and affectionate home health aide with more than 30 years of experience providing loving care and attention to the full spectrum of life from infants to elders. She has been a respected Always On Call Health Services, Inc. employee for two years. During these trying times, Baker focused her energy on providing the level of quality care to her clients that she states "she would want for herself." Her drive to provide excellence is nothing more than remarkable. Throughout the COVID-19 pandemic, Baker has not only performed every scheduled assignment with her clients, but has also made herself available to pick up additional visits outside of her normal work load to help more people, which is a testament to her values and commitment to homecare. The Home Care Aide Recognition Day is a joint effort through the Enough Pay to Stay Coalition, which is comprised of the Home Care Aide Council, The Home Care Alliance, and Mass Home Care.
